

Bottling Works Again Changes Ownership

The Mt. Sterling Bottling Works, recently purchased by Victor Williams, has again changed ownership, Mr. J. C. Stacy, of Morgan county, becoming the purchaser. Mr. Stacy is now in possession, is running with a full force and beginning Oct. 1st he will enlarge the plant, making it not only one of the most modern in the State but with much greater capacity.

Mr. Stacy will also add machinery and manufacture the celebrated "Stephens Crackerjack" in large quantities, and distribute it through the jobbers to the trade. He will also have an uptown retail store through which he will handle his output locally. Mr. Stacy is one of Morgan county's best business men, a hustler, and will remove here with his family as soon as he can secure a home. We gladly welcome Mr. Stacy and family to Mt. Sterling.

A WORD TO THE WISE

Dr. A. B. Stoops, who owns one of the most complete farms in this section has this to say, and just here we would add, "the advice is worth while." "I had two fine barns, one is on a high elevation where the wind could have a fair sweep, and this I have insured against storms, another at a different location, but nearby and below the level of the surrounding hills where I thought it protected against the winds. The one on the hill top escaped Monday's storm without damage while the one protected was seriously damaged. As soon as the one under the hill is repaired it will be insured also." Better be safe than sorry.

COMMUNITY CARNIVAL AND STYLE SHOW

Even before Kentucky women took their stand aside of men something worth while was on a continuous pull at Lexington, and now since they have every legal right that belongs to our people we can note them, not heart to heart and hand to hand, but as leaders in all gatherings whether in religious conventions or representative bodies that choose from the masses candidates for favors that are highest within the gift of the people. They have a vision for things elevating, that will develop men and women mentally so that they may climb to heights or delve to depths.

Among the communities that appear first under the sensitive touch, the alert minds of our women is that of our cultured city of Lexington.

Mrs. W. H. Thompson, an aunt of Lewis Mitchell, of this city, President of the club and Miss Daisy Proctor, formerly a resident of Mt. Sterling, now a business woman of Lexington, is Secretary and Treasurer of the Business and Professional Woman's Club, of Lexington, which will give a Community Carnival and Style Show at Lexington in the large tobacco warehouse known as Fayette No. 3, on the evenings of Oct. 4, 5, 6, and 7. The Governor of the State has promised to open this exhibition for them. Each merchant is to be asked to take a booth and advertise his merchandise. As well as an advertisement for the merchants and farmers, they also wish to bring before the public the religious, educational, health and political relations of the community. A horse show will be a special feature the first two evenings, and a style show (living models) for the last two. A band concert each evening. The club hopes to make this a permanent event and after this year wish to include Central and Eastern Kentucky in the exhibition.

Mrs. A. V. Jones is well again and is arranging to open her store, West Main, one door west of the Advocate Company, with an up-to-date line of millinery. The date of the opening will be September 15th. Watch the Advocate for notices relative to the opening day. 94-3t

Kilpatrick Resigns As Post Commander

Lewis H. Kilpatrick has resigned as Commander of the Montgomery Post, American Legion, and Vice Commander, Clarence William is now at the head of the local organization. Mr. Kilpatrick has made a splendid officer and his resignation was accepted with regret. Mr. William also, will make an excellent officer, and will give much of his time and attention to the upbuilding of the Montgomery Post.

ROBT. C. GATEWOOD ILL

Robert C. Gatewood, one of Montgomery county's wealthiest and most prominent citizens, is seriously ill at the St. Joseph Hospital in Lexington where he was taken on Tuesday for treatment. Mr. Gatewood is suffering from an infected throat and while still in a critical condition he is holding his own and attending physicians state that he has a good chance to recover. Mrs. Gatewood is with her husband at the hospital.

BACK FIRE

We heard a traveling salesman tell a good story that might apply to many men. He said while giving a display in a West Virginia town a customer told him of a dentist who always went to a nearby city to buy his clothes and while making his living off the people in one community was spending it in another without showing any increase in personal appearance. The merchant called the dentist one day and said, "Doc, who's the best dentist in that town?" Doc says, "Why?" Whereupon the merchant says, "I have several teeth that need attention and I wanted the best one up there to do the work." Buy at home and look better. The Walsh Co., Inc.

GIRL DIES OF GRIEF

Grief killed Mary Miles Standish, at her home in Warsaw, N. Y., whose funeral was held exactly one week after the burial of her sweetheart, Lloyd Warren, of Hermitage. Warren was asphyxiated by fumes from an auto on which he was working in a small garage. When told of his death Miss Standish fell in a swoon which was followed by a period of semi-consciousness and delirium, until death occurred. Miss Standish was 21 years old.

Narrow Escape From Serious Injury

Yesterday while out hunting with a party of friends Howell Hunt received in his face a considerable part of the discharge from a shotgun. The shot pierced each cheek and one barely missed an eye. This is another case of the reckless handling and firing of guns. Mr. Hunt is able to be out today but carries marks of the accident.

DELICATE OPERATION PERFORMED BY DR WELLS

Dr E. D. Wells, of the C. & O. Hospital, Huntington, W. Va., performed a very delicate operation at the Mary Chiles Hospital on the throat of Miss Katherine Reynolds, daughter of Dr. J. F. Reynolds, of this city, last week, and the patient is now fast recovering. We seldom mention the name of any doctor in connection with professional duties because to do so is classed an intrusion on medical etiquette. However we may be pardoned for this digression when it is considered that Dr. Wells is a Montgomery county product, born, raised, educated here, tutored by Dr. J. F. Reynolds, graduate of Louisville Medical College, and who by his own merit has attained by degrees to the highest of his profession that gave to him the position in the C. & O. hospital at Huntington the position of specialist in the treatment and surgery of the eye, ear, nose and throat at this hospital. We are always glad to note the height and worthy attainment of Montgomery county products.
